

Technology: Knowhow Studies

Who helps me to compile specific knowhow?

TEMAS supports the customer with testing, planning and carrying out of projects with technological background and high innovation structure. That includes particularly the analysis, definition and development of expertise with the goal to find something effectively and efficiently as well.

What are search fields for expertise and what are they used for?

Possible expertise fields are technology, materials, market analysis, possibilities to maximize capacities and processes, external cooperation, external cooperating partners, market segments, target groups, functions, areas of application, localities, technical competencies, new technologies, etc.

The expertise is used for different purposes:

- Structured, methodical and systematic generation of ideas
- Determination of current internal knowledge base and external knowledge needs
- Systematic analysis

Thus the search fields are the fundamentals of each innovation process!

For the definition of new expertise, a list of relevant questions will be methodically obtained from and together with the customer that is situation-specific to their own business and project goals and is content-wise developed by TEMAS.

The new expertise will be then analogically built, refined or completely new created to supplement the existing expertise.

What services does TEMAS expertise bring?

- Operationalize goals and transfer them into concrete course of actions
- Assist as a catalyst with the search of ideas and solutions
- Show comprehensively an actual internal information situation and therefore efficiently set boundaries for external knowledge acquisition
- Simplify the access to external services, methods, instruments/devices and systems/processes that are important for the external resource acquisition.

The search field of expertise services delivers a manageable budget for preselected and precisely defined expertise to process and put technological questions of any kind in practice in a short amount of time and under strict cost control.
