

Apprenticeship: Professional presentations creating and presenting

How do I say it the best? What do I show? What do I want that the audience retains, especially everything that I said?

There are only a few people who were really able to draw me in with their presentation. In the 25 years in my career, I can count on both hands the number of times someone actually made a really good presentation.

It is just like learning how to play the piano. 90% is ability through practice. The last 10% is charisma, which you either have or not. But a 90% good presentation from a person with no charisma is still better to listen to than a 50% good presentation from a person with charisma.

We will very practically practice with you and review the “do’s” and “don’ts”. We will help with the:

- preparation of a presentation,
- “history” of the presentation,
- key elements and central message,
- body language and the
- image composition,
- text composition and the
- interaction with the audience.

We would like to give you more information. Can we reach out to you?
